Comments: So as to not hinder traffic crow hill the area known locally as the knob ideal area large in size a roadway for single file traffic leading to a car park with a few seats overlooking the village let us complete what the developers said they would do years ago that is land scape it .

Comments: I think the memorial needs to be viewable from the main road - so this one seems the most sensible version. There is also a ready made space at this site.

Comments: I feel it should be placed somewhere peaceful away from traffic noise and fumes. It should be a place where people can come sit and reflect and remember the fallen.

Comments: I like the Western Road location. A bit of space around it, easy to see, suitable place for a gathering of people. Lived in Borough Green all my life and haven't a clue where Crowhill Knob is (obviously somewhere around Crowhill!) Library and Village Hall look like it has just been crammed in somewhere. Rock Road is not a safe place from the traffic point of view, in fact, I would say dangerous.

Comments: Having been involved with Remembrance ceremonies at the Platt Memorial, it is a nightmare having cars whizzing past all the time. Others mention closing the road for a service at the Western Road site but I think you will find that the police will not do this. They won't close the A25 at Platt, and there are two roads involved at the Western Road junction. The setting at the library will be a peaceful place for anyone wanting a quiet moment by the memorial. That would not be possible in any of the other locations apart from Crow Hill, which is too far out of the village.

Comments: This should stand proud at the entrance to the village. A visible 24/7 location has to be a better and more fitting tribute to those who gave their lives than a hidden or less visible location that is more accommodating for a once a year service. We can close roads off for the very well supported and attended Xmas lights. I am sure we could manage a similar something for the remembrance service. The western road location also has the advantage that all the passing traffic (until we get the missing slip roads) will see it too. Once we have the slip roads it would be in a more tranquil location by default. A win/win.

Comments: Looking at all 5 sites, I would say that the Western Road or the High Street location would be most suitable. Crowhill, Rock Road and behind the Library seem a little bit out of site out of mind. Western Rd has the advantage that there is greenery and a bit of space around it and also whilst being in a prominent location is slightly away from the eye if people did want some space. The High St could have an advantage that the Road could be shut off for Remembrance Day itself and therefore a little quieter however would always be overlooked if people wanted 5-10 mins throughout the year>

Dear Committee

I think locating the memorial at the Western Road Triangle would be fine. If, for any reason, this proves not to be possible, what about the site of the Jubilee Oak at the junction of Rock Road and Quarry Hill Road? I appreciate that the Oak is protected, but the sad fact of the matter is that the tree is dying. Its fungal infection advanced rapidly this year and it probably will not last more than another year or so. A war memorial would be a worthy successor.

I served over 25 years in the regular forces spending time in many places abroad and at home. I married and started a family whilst in the forces which also travelled with me. I have been a resident of Borough Green for more than 14 years and my family before that and therefore fully support the memorial plan for all who lost loved ones.

Having polled my close family with the options for locations of the war memorial we whittled it down to 2 potentials:

1. The crowhill knob being a high point
2. The green on Western Road

We settled unanimously for the green on junction of Western Road being a highly prominent and visible location to all travellers and residents.

However the recreation area may also on reflection be a suitable area for consideration being visible with under-used tennis courts, a pavilion that is supposed to be a memorial (used and abused) but all will no doubt be dependant on costs and plan

Hi Mike

This email is in reference to the siting of the proposed War Memorial, for which I fully support being erected within the Parish. I have given consideration to all previously suggested sites and also have tried to think of other suitable sites.

My first choice would be the Ridge behind the houses in Huntsman Close and Sandy Ridge. This is based on its naturally beautiful location and outlook. Alas I feel that unless the ground has a total makeover and is landscaped then it wouldn't be suitable at all. Also it's out of the way position may mean that it isn't visited sufficiently by the public but may well attract the unwanted and unruly types.

Therefore my vote goes to the 'triangle' opposite the Red Lion. It is very much a public location already. It will be seen by very many people without them having to go out of their way to visit it. Because it is in such a public location it wouldn't attract the unwanted types to the degree that an out of the way location would. There is sufficient room for a fair sized monument and the opportunity to keep the area as a lawn and flower bed to compliment the monument.

I hope this helps towards the decision making. Many thanks Barry

Love idea of the slab of granite - dark green (Borough Green) and gold lettering would look fantastic.

4. On a hi note the war memorial should be in local stone from any of the quarries we have locally and the position suggested (Western Rd) is perfect.

I look forward to your comments

Kind regards
